We are continually furnished information regarding the quality of goods and services by entities in both the public and private sectors.

There are publications, laws, and regulatory bodies to afford some measure of consumer protection in nearly every area of enterprise.

These are helpful for they provide methods of comparing the worth of what is offered.

It is important to recognize what is diluted, fraudulent, counterfeit, spurious, and/or impractical--- as opposed to that which is genuine, worthy, and therefore valuable.

Although it is always better to thoroughly evaluate prior to making a commitment, late is better than never.

Those who would protect our interests may have been remiss.

It is far past time for a penetrating consumer evaluation of
