Evidence Based Care Models for Recognizing and Treating Alcohol Problems in Primary Care Settings Katherine Watkins

Alcohol-related problems are a significant public health concern in the United States. Effective treatments exist for the entire spectrum of alcoholrelated problems; however, fewer than half of those who need treatment actually receive it. This report discusses how a chronic disease managementmodel can be adapted to improve the detection, treatment, and management of patients with alcohol-related problems in primary care settings. The report highlights the relevant literature and discusses issues and strategies for consideration in building, implementing, and evaluating a chronic care modelfor alcohol problems in primary care settings. Within the context of the chronic care model, the authors also review the characteristics of the mostwidely used alcohol disorder screening instruments suitable for use in primary care settings. Further work is needed to develop and collect thenecessary tools and resources to implement the model and to determine itsfeasibility and potential impact.
