Workplace Worship was written for professionals looking to accelerate their careers, find meaning in the mundane, and avoid having to check their faith at the door. It's a compelling case for how spiritual influence works at work and provides insights on how you can build a career that esteems God, inspires others, and positions you for success. Workplace Worship takes a fresh look at the Great Commission as recorded in Mark 16:15 and provides tips, tools, and strategies that address how every Christian can positively influence the world for Christ, without ever standing in front of a church, preaching from behind a pulpit, or knocking on doors. It presents the premise that your work is a type of worship, and how you engage in this type of worship makes all the difference to both your influence and success.
